Lighthouse Preservation Assistance from the Runciman Fund for Heritage Conservation

The Heritage Canada Foundation is pleased to announce the availability of heritage grant funding for historic lighthouses along Nova Scotia's Fundy Shore, in the counties of Digby, Annapolis and Kings.

While all lighthouses in this part of the province are eligible to apply for funding, it is our hope that this new source of funding will encourage groups to come forward with petitions nominating surplus lighthouses for designation, given the pressure local communities are under to find solutions for lighthouses recently declared surplus by the federal government. There is a May 29, 2012 deadline for individuals or communities to petition for heritage designation of surplus lighthouses, and indicate a willingness to acquire them. There is then an obligation to prepare a business plan demonstrating how the community plans to fund, protect and maintain the structure over the long term. Financial support from the Runciman Fund can be part of a viable business plan to sustain these historic lighthouses over the long term.

The Runciman Family shaped the commercial and cultural life of Annapolis Royal, and provided HCF with a bequest that in part created the Runciman Fund for Heritage Conservation.

Donors who would like to contribute to the Runciman Fund for Heritage Conservation, or help create additional lighthouse preservation funds, are encouraged to contact the Heritage Canada Foundation.
